WomenInNano

Final European Workshop: Strengthening the role of women scientists in Nano-Science

06-07 March 2008
IFW Dresden, Germany

Leibniz Institute for Solid
State and Materials Research
Dresden

Scope

The Specific Support Action (SSA) "Strengthening the Role of Women Scientists in Nano-Science" = WomenInNano is funded by the European Commission in the 6th Framework Programme under the Science and Society, Women and Science theme. It brings together 11 partners from 9 European countries - Germany, Romania, Sweden, Spain, Slovenia, United Kingdom, Bulgaria, Italy and France. The basic idea of the project is to allow high-level women scientists working in Nano-Science to act as Ambassadors for Women and Science in order to raise awareness of gender issues in science (more specific, in Nano-Science) and to provide 'role models' for girls and women, with a view to encouraging them to consider studies and pursue careers in scientific fields. The project will empower and enlarge the women scientists group working in Nano-Science and increase its visibility in the international scientific community. WomenInNano proposes a series of activities, which will create and stimulate structural links at national, trans-national, regional and trans-regional level between scientists (female and male), policy makers and society at large. The final workshop which will be held in Dresden is focused to disseminate the findings of the results of the project. It aims identify barriers to women's participation in EU research programmes. At the same time, it offers a special opportunity for women scientists in communicating their work to a larger public.
